Wade Scaramucci

Originally from Oklahoma City, Wade moved to the United Kingdom in 1999 following completion of a Bachelors in Architecture from the University of Oklahoma in 1996.

Wade is an architect and Associate Director of London based Allford Hall Monaghan Morris (AHMM) and has completed a series of high profile projects including Horseferry House, the global headquarters for the fashion house Burberry, the Stirling Prize shortlisted Angel Building and Google's DeepMind headquarters.

Fascinated with the ongoing regeneration of Oklahoma City, Wade established AHMM's Oklahoma City office in 2008 and has completed several ambitious projects including Level and Mosaic Urban Apartments, The Plow Building, The AEP Fitness Center / Oklahoma City Ballet, Bob Moore Auto Group Headquarters, Jesus Saves, The OkSea Project and Squirrel Park.

In addition to his project work, Wade is active in wider architectural discussions including being a frequent lecturer, teacher and as a design advisor for the UK Design Council and London Borough of Wandsworth.

Wade lives in London with his wife Diana Osman and son Maximilian Philip Scaramucci.
